Liquid Porcelain is formulated from a blend of polymer resins. This state-of-the-art synthetic glaze has the lustre and texture of porcelain combined with unrivalled durability and toughness.

The chemical structure allows for a very high build capability, allowing a heavier coating to be applied to surfaces than typical urethane products. Liquid Porcelain also masks minor physical defects that would generally require filling or sanding prior to the application of other refinishing products.

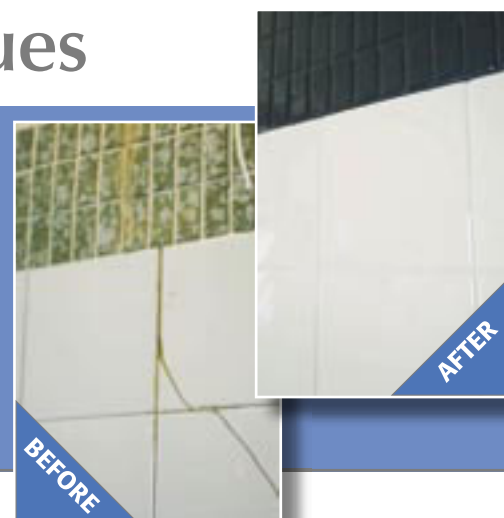

The application process does not require air fed respirators, making it suitable for use around people. Liquid Porcelain is also safer because it does not contain harmful polyisocyanates resins, meaning that chemical odours are easily dissipated.

Solving health and hygiene issues

Condensation particularly affects the grouting between tiles turning them black and mouldy, creating health and hygiene issues.

With Liquid Porcelain, maintenance is made faster, cheaper and easier. The tiles and grouting are sealed by applying synthetic porcelain then surfaces only require washing with soapy water.
